

Public Health Agency of Canada Violence Prevention Portal

The screenshot shows the 'Canadian Best Practices Portal' website. The header includes the Public Health Agency of Canada logo, a search bar, and navigation tabs for 'Chronic Diseases', 'Best Practices', 'Resources', 'Public Health Topics', 'Policy Issues', and 'Learn More'. The main content area is titled 'Category Page: Preventing Violence' and features a green icon of a person with arms raised. The text defines violence according to the World Health Organization (2004) and states that implementing prevention programs can reduce long-term effects.

PREVNet is working with the Public Health Agency of Canada (PHAC) to provide information about bullying prevention strategies that actually work. Research shows most educators choose bullying prevention programs on word of mouth, but 15% of these programs do more harm than good. That's why PREVNet systematically reviewed violence prevention programs from around the world to identify effective interventions that are found on the 'Preventing Violence' stream on the Canadian Best Practices Portal. This online collection of peer-reviewed, evidence-based violence prevention programs can be used by schools, community organizations and other users. The "Preventing Violence" stream on the Canadian Best Practices Portal makes sure that Canadians have access to the latest and most effective information on bullying and how to prevent it.

Back to "In this issue"